Preregistration petition

Drive started to eliminate special privileges for athletes, others

BY KAREN GRAVES

Daily Staff Writer

A petition is being circulated that proposes placing an initiative dealing with pre-registration on the ballot for the ASI 1980 general election, to be in May.

The Equal Registration Initiative seeks to eliminate pre-registration based on special privilege to groups and individuals, said Stephen Jensen, campus Libertarian chairman and one sponsor of the petition.

This initiative will eliminate Resolution 79-01, which grants pre-registration to about 250 athletes, 50 registration workers, 60 ASI officers, chairpersons, senators and board members, 35 agricultural students involved in on-going projects, the Orchestras Dance Club, the Rodeo Team, and three KCPR managers.

The petition proposes for students to register in the following order: disabled students, new students, graduate students and seniors who have completed 135 quarter units, and then continuing students. It states: "Registration shall not be used for special privilege by any group or individual."

To place the initiative on the ballot, the number of signatures needed is 5 percent of the people who voted in the last general election, or about 200 people, said Jensen. The petition drive began Wednesday, he said.

The petition must be turned in to the Activities Planning Center where signatures will be verified by checking social security numbers, said Anne Perry, student senator from the School of Business.

When there is a certified number of signatures on the petition, the initiative will be forwarded to the student senate, said Perry. The senate must then vote to put the initiative on the spring ballot, she said.

Libertarians plan an anti-draft rally

BY TOM KINSOLVING

Daily Staff Writer

"The problem is getting this conservative campus off its ass to do something," was one opening comment at the Campus Libertarians meeting Wednesday in the University Union.

The Libertarians are planning a May Day-campus demonstration and an anti-conscription seminar, which chairman Steve Jensen hopes will give its participants "a sense of solidarity."

The seminar, which is scheduled for Saturday, May 3, in Crandall Gymnasium, will be structured on a "high intellectual level," according to Jensen.

Twelve Libertarians were present at the meeting, two of them student senators. The group unanimously decided to call their new movement Coalition Against The Draft.

The theme of the meeting, one member humorously remarked, was "Close the window—I oppose the draft."

Some of the subjects to be discussed at the seminar will include the economic, political and religious aspects of the draft. A history instructor, episcopal minister and economist were some of the suggested speakers.

"Maybe we can get a folk singer like Pete Seeger," said one Libertarian.

Jensen wants the anti-conscription coalition to "demonstrate to the community it is a broad-based reasonable approach to a real major problem"

The Libertarian chairman was asked why his group is just as vehemently opposed to mandatory draft registration as the actual draft.

Jensen drew an analogy. "It's like being broke and contemplating robbing a Safeway store. You then go out and buy a Saturday night special, and continue contemplating," he explained.

The Libertarians' plan to unite the coalition with other community groups such as Mothers for Peace, Abalone Alliance and members of the Unitarian Church.

Flyers announcing the anti-draft functions will serve as the main part of the coalition's advertising campaign. Another idea was to sell t-shirts emblazoned with the phrase "Stop The Draft."

The question of funding was also raised. The option of requesting ASI funds was ruled out. A student senator said ASI bylaws prohibit the organization's funds from being allocated for political purposes.

Jensen, a Vietnam veteran who was drafted in 1968, remarked that the goal of his movement is "to avoid the alienating mistakes of past anti-draft activities," referring to the violent Vietnam protests in the early 1970s.

Jensen said in the past five years he has become involved in the Libertarian movement, which in principle states that the citizenry should be allowed to act completely with free will, with no governmental intervention.

Senate supports beer at Poly Royal

BY MELISSA HILTON

Daily Staff Writer

A sharply divided student senate voted 14-11 Wednesday to recommend both a general policy to allow alcohol on campus and the specific sale of beer at the Poly Royal barbecue.

President Warren Baker must make the final decisions about alcohol on campus, but the student senate voted to recommend ending Cal Poly's 79 years as a "dry" campus.

Alcohol would be allowed only at special events run by ASI-chartered organizations according to the senate's proposal. The Activities Planning Center would have to approve each license to serve alcohol, and the campus police would be notified two days in advance.

Beer or wine would be served in a restricted area, with no open containers allowed in or out of the exits. One individual authorized by the organization would be responsible for making sure the rules were followed.

"Hopefully the groups at Cal Poly are going to be responsible enough to self-police," said Tom Cregger, senator from the School of Social Sciences.

"The integrity of the students is really being challenged on this issue," said Nancy Bronte, senator from the School of Business. The university's present policy assumes students are not responsible enough to serve alcohol on campus, she said.

Cal Poly students often fail to work up to managerial jobs because they don't get responsibilities such as alcohol on campus, said ASI President Rose Kranz.

"It would be a learning experience in an environment which is controlled," she said.

But Paul Shankwiler, senator from the School of Science and Mathematics, said non-drinkers and students under 21 would feel left out at events where beer is served.

"And I haven't heard one good reason why it will improve a social activity on this campus," he said.

Many parents of students think Cal Poly is "a distinguished school and honorable" because it doesn't allow alcohol, said senator Mark Harlan from the School of Science and Mathematics.

Senators reported the school councils from Science and Mathematics and Agriculture and Environmental Design opposed allowing alcohol on campus. The Business, Engineering and Technology, and Communicative Arts and Humanities school councils endorsed it.

Three thousand students signed petitions to let Delta Sigma Phi sell beer at its Poly Royal barbecue, said ASI President Rose Kranz, so at least 20 percent of the university's students do want alcohol on campus.

The resolution to let the fraternity sell beer at its annual barbecue in Poly Grove at Poly Royal was also approved 14-11 Wednesday. Cregger said Delta Sigma Phi's application, which was introduced in the senate before the general policy on alcohol, fits the policy's guidelines perfectly.

Both resolutions will now go to President Baker.

Cal Poly hosts engineers

The Cal Poly chapter of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers is sponsoring the annual western regional student conference on today and Saturday. Speakers from industry and government will be featured. Students and faculty from 12 universities will attend.

Highlights of the conference include a lead-off speech by Dr. Allen Haile, secretarial representative for the U.S. Department of Commerce. Haile, who is active in the San Francisco Black Leadership Forum, will speak on "The Economic Effects of Productivity" on Friday.

Other speakers scheduled include Daniel Clark, vice president of AIIE Region XII and western regional director of the MTM Association for Standards and Research; J. Robert Copper, vice president of strategic planning and analysis with the Pillsbury Company; and Sandra Keifer, a self-employed energy consultant.

Anyone wishing to hear the speakers may pay a $5 registration fee on Friday, between 8 and 9 a.m. in Chumash Auditorium. The conference will begin at 9 a.m.

Goin' fishin'

Almost four weeks have passed since the FBI's "Operation Abscam" came to the surface, but it is still risky to draw conclusions about it. Eight Congressmen, newspaper accounts stated, were "implicated" in the bribing scheme.

The seven representatives and one senator have been named, but the Justice Department is not releasing much information about the operation because it does not want pre-trial publicity to ruin chances of getting convictions.

Some protests have been raised that the congressmen were unfairly lured into accepting bribes from the agents, who posed as envoys of a wealthy Middle Eastern shiek. The FBI, one senator said, seems to be playing games at random with congressmen in trying to entrap them.

Is this what the FBI did—entrap eight hapless congressmen? According to U.S. News and World Report, "entrapment" is defined in District of Columbia courts as an instance in which law-enforcement people "induce or persuade an unwilling person to commit an unlawful act."

FBI agents did not use persuasion any more than a fisherman persuades fish to bite his hook.

It does seem the FBI pursued specific individuals. But the whole case began when an informant told agents he could introduce them to public officials on the take. What angler would ignore the advice of an experienced fishing guide?

"Well, they dangled all that money in front of those congressmen, and that's not fair" it might be said. No, nothing is wrong with using bait that suits the kind of fish being sought after.

Entrapment? Inducement? Nope. Going to the right fishing hole and using the right bait is neither entrapment or inducement. Fish, after all, still have the choice not to bite.

Speaking of fishing—the "Abscam" scandal is a sign of the new direction taken by the FBI since J. Edgar Hoover was replaced as director.

The present director, William H. Webster, is leading the bureau away from its old emphasis on watching American political dissenters and solving relatively easy crimes such as bank holdups.

Letters

Zero hour

Editors:

Most physicians treat ailments by attacking the symptoms. A cold and fever is usually treated by giving prescriptions or shots, but the cause of the cold is totally neglected.

Presently, college campuses are experiencing a new found political activism. This activism is directed against the draft registration proposal. It's believed that resistance to draft registration will prevent its occurrence. Again, just as the physician treats symptoms, so does the anti-draft registration movement.

What needs to be analyzed is the cause for enacting draft registration. Actual warfare is the primary cause. It promotes exorbitant defense budgets, militarism, and the ultimate failure in human reason. If the draft registration proposal can be stopped, emphasis must be placed at the cause—war.

Some general causes for war that Keneath Waltz puts forth in his book, Man, The State, and War, are the internal structures of a nation—states, human behavior and international anarchy. A country that suffers from debilitating internal chaos could evoke military action by a neighboring state, e.g., Afghanistan was invaded by the U.S.S.R. Attacking the draft proposal could signal to the Russians that America is unwilling or unable to deter further aggression. Internal disagreement is perceived as a sign of weakness by foreign heads of state.

This type of internal disagreement is a product of human behavior. It's how we act toward each other and the possible misinterpretation of those actions that cause war. I find human behavior to be undefinable. How can one predict if one's actions will provoke another person? But, within a state, laws exist to prevent ultimate violence.

On a macrocosmic level, vis-a-vis nation-states, comprehension of intent is ambiguous. Conflict between countries could be the result of international anarchy. Country "A" could mobilize its forces for purely defensive reasons, but country "B" might perceive the action as a direct threat. It's as if the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing.

To find the cause of war is difficult, to say the least. Treating symptoms avoids the inevitable truth. Human beings are basically afraid to look at themselves, what they see is frightening. Then again, how much longer can the mask be held up, as the clock ticks even closer to zero hour.

Students do count

Editors:

In response to Joe Stein's opinion piece on ASI ads, I would just like to ask—how? How can any aspiring journalist take the attitude that the students of Cal Poly deserve "little if any representation in government"? That it is not the responsibility of the ASI, any public official or the Mustang Daily to "encourage public participation in their decision making".

I pray that Stein is planning only to use his journalistic skills on features about new strains of tomatoes or crossword puzzles. This cynicism will surely not enable him to write a competent story which directly affects the "people who vote blindly or not at all".

The proposal to run a series of ads to inform you about complex issues is a good one. To spend hours a night studying equations and/or political theories which we wonder if we'll ever use again is one thing. To spend five minutes reading about an issue that will directly effect our pocketbooks, classes and rights and then have the opportunity to comment on them is another.

For Stein to claim that it does not matter not only shows a lack of respect for the students in general and their power as a unifying group.

No issue is so complex that you cannot understand or comment intelligently about it—no one should try to convince you otherwise. Sometimes ASI fails to be responsive, but it tries. It is now trying even harder. Don't let a student like Stein convince you otherwise and especially don't let him convince you that you don't count.

Soviets alert for Afghan violence

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Soviet and Afghan troops were placed on full alert Thursday in readiness for possible new anti-Communist demonstrations and violence as worshippers emerge from Friday prayer in Kabul's mosques.

Spokesmen for the Islamic guerrilla movement told reporters attacks were planned for Friday despite a reign of terror in rebel strongholds by the militia of the ruling Khalq People's Party.

Reliable diplomatic sources said dozens of alleged rebels or rebel sympathizers have been executed since fighting last week. Rebel sympathizers claimed the militia had executed "many hundreds."

Some Western diplomats expressed skepticism about the guerrillas' ability to mount another citywide offensive so soon after suffering at least 300 dead and an estimated 1,000 injured in last week's street battles, which the government blamed on "imperialist agents and saboteurs" in the pay of Pakistan, China and the United States.

The Pakistani news agency PPI said rebels in Afghanistan shot down two Soviet helicopters Sunday in Ghazni and Kandhar provinces and killed 41 troops, including three Russian officers, in a night attack Friday in Iuar province. The news agency said demonstrations against the Soviets had occurred in northern, central and southern Afghanistan.

None of the information reported by the Pakistani news agency could be confirmed from other sources.

UN board tours Iranian prison

From the Associated Press

A U.N. commission investigating charges against the deposed shah toured a notorious prison on Thursday and met with a representative of the ruling Revolutionary Council.

Efforts to arrange a commission meeting with the American hostages were unsuccessful, at least for the time being. The militant captors said they had not decided whether to permit it.

It was feared the approximately 50 Americans, who have been captive in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for 117 days, might not be freed for 10 more weeks. A leading official has said it might take that long for the as-yet-unformed Parliament to make a decision.

On its fifth full day in Iran the U.N. panel visited the ousted shah's main residence, then toured Evin prison where thousands allegedly were tortured by SAVAK, the shah's secret police, before the monarch was forced from the throne before last year's Islamic revolution.

State funds three-year fuels test

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state Energy Commission has allocated $2 million for a three-year test of alcohol fuels in automobiles.

It also said it would loan up to $3 million to private companies and individuals to develop plants to convert waste materials into alcohol for fuel.

The object of the test in cars is to find out how much alcohol costs per mile, what it does to the air, and how it compares to gasoline or diesel fuel.

Both ethanol and methanol will be tested. Ethanol, usually made from grain, is what's in liquor. Methanol, often called "wood alcohol," is poisonous and is made from wood, coal, garbage or natural gas.

The commission will select automobiles to be modified and tested from both state and private fleets and will choose a company to supply the fuel.

The commission allocated $250,000 to explore using waste materials to produce ethanol. The project provides up to $3 million in no-interest and low interest loans to private companies and individuals to develop and construct ethanol plants.

The commission will evaluate proposals and recommend to the state Business and Transportation Agency which ones to support.

The money for both programs comes from $10 million authorized in a law passed last year.

NRC: Reactors probably to run

WASHINGTON (AP) — John F. Ahearne, the chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory commission, said Thursday he doesn't anticipate that this week's nuclear power plant accident in Florida will require a shut down of other reactors by the same designer.

However, Ahearne told a Senate subcommittee he won't make a final decision until after he receives a full report on the Florida incident, which he said he expects next Tuesday.

Ahearne testified shortly before the NRC was to hear arguments for lifting its self-imposed moratorium on the licensing of new nuclear plants. No new licenses have been issued since the Three Mile Island accident in Pennsylvania nearly a year ago.

Gunfire heard at Bogota embassy

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Leftist guerrillas threatening to kill the U.S. ambassador to Colombia and some other 60 hostages in the Dominican Republic's embassy lifted the 10 p.m. EST deadline they had set for their demands to be met, a Colombian Cabinet minister said this morning.

Gunfire broke out early this afternoon at the besieged embassy. The guerrilla leader said the gunshots came from Colombian government snipers firing on the embassy.

The gunfire, the first since soon after the Wednesday attack, could be heard in the background on the telephone. But there was no immediate word of any new casualties.

The guerrilla gang's leader told The Associated Press by telephone, "We are prepared to remain here one or two months if necessary. It all depends on whether the government wants to negotiate or not."

"Commander No. 1," as the terrorist chief called himself also said that the guerrillas would free all women and two wounded hostages as soon as the government begins negotiating their demands

The estimated 30 guerrillas, who stormed into the Dominican mission during a noon diplomatic reception Wednesday, are demanding $50 million, the release of 311 political prisoners, publication of an anti-government manifesto in major foreign newspapers, and safe passage out of the country.

Petition

The senator pointed out that if the initiative does reach the senate floor, the senate is required to approve it.

The Equal Registration Initiative was started because it is felt there are enough students that want the issue brought before them said Jensen.

Special groups like athletes and senators should not be allowed the privilege of pre-registraion because they choose to be involved in their activities, said Jensen.

The petition is supported by the Campus Libertarians and a number of people in the Schools of Business and Architecture and Environmental Design, said Perry.

"The measure of our support will be how long it takes us to get the signatures," said Perry.

One of the biggest problems with pre-registration, Perry said, is the people that have it want to keep it. "Since the senate has it, you can't get rid of it," she said.

Under the present system, three percent of Cal Poly students receive pre-registration privileges. The difficulty with this is that the three percent who deserve it can't be singled out, said Perry.

Students who do not receive pre-registraion include chairmen of Week of Welcome, the ASI Concert Committee and the ASI Films Committee, she said.

One argument against eliminating special group pre-registration is many groups feel they can't function without it. However, Jensen commented, "It's amazing the units that function quite well with pre-registration."

Jensen believes senators should be more responsive to student views on issues.

Rally

When asked about the necessity of raising armed forces in the event of declared war, Jensen replied, "If we were attacked—and our territorial rights were threatened—then you would not need a draft. People would join voluntarily."

The military situation in Europe, where NATO forces are vastly outnumbered in manpower by the Soviet Warsaw Pact, does not warrant the draft, says Jensen.

"Why should we be responsible for western Europe?" he asked. Jensen condemned the draft as "grisly" and "horrible," claiming a big military pay check would adequately bolster the US armed forces abroad.

Jensen said conscription should instead be applied to military related industries.

Besides solidarity, Jensen aspires to have the Coalition Against The Draft instill a "broader based education regarding conscription."

Starship moves into harder rock orbit

BY JIM HENDRY

Daily Entertainment Editor

All things change.

The Jefferson Airplane, their roots locked in the LSD and L.B.J. era in San Francisco, years ago changed names to the Jefferson Starship, signalling an end to a transition in the pop music industry.

The Deadheads are still around, so is marijuana in greater quantities, and resistance to the draft still exists, but the sound that rings the record store cash registers across the country is changing.

With a new lead vocalist, drummer and a louder, harder sound, the Jefferson Starship touched down in the Main Gym Sunday night long enough to show that the band has again changed its course.

"It's simply a new band," Pete Sears said during a news conference attended only by the Mustang Daily and a number of spectators.

"It's at point zero, too," guitarist/songwriter Paul Katner added, referring to the group's latest album, Freedom At Point Zero.

"We don't have to play Miracles or White Rabbit anymore, which is sort of old hat now, anyway," he said.

"We still do some of the old Starship stuff but it's more in a rock vein, things we all wrote," guitarist Craig Chaquico said. After a three-hour show that included three encores, Chaquico seemingly was the most energetic and eagerly responded to the Daily's questions.

"Most of the mellow stuff we just don't do anymore. It's kind of funny, but a lot of people who used to hate us are starting to like us now with the harder sound," said Chaquico.

Katner also said the band is planning to go even further in the hard rock direction on their next album.

Without Grace Slick and Marty Balin, the band's former lead vocalists, the Starship is utilizing the talents of former Journey drummer Aynsley Dunbar and vocalist Mickey Thomas, from the Elvin Bishop Band, to produce a leaner, louder sound.

An extremely loud performance, the Sunday night show was full of energy and vibrance by the newly-constructed Starship.

"It was f----- great," the girl in front of me screamed as the band finished their last encore, the Airplane classic, Sombody To Love. And judging by audience reaction, it was a d--- good show.

There were times, however, when the show began to sound like one long continuous jam.

Extended solos by Dunbar, Chaquico and Sears dominated the middle part of the concert, by taking the Starship into the black hole of boredom. While at times excellent—especially a knuckle breaking bass solo by Sears—the excessive solo breaks could be due to the present band's stake in switching interest away from the old Starship and towards this band's present album.

Asked whether the band was active in the anti-nuclear movement, Katner said he has been working with actress Jane Fonda on a benefit concert for the anti-nukes.

The Starship, sometimes active politically, helped raise over $100,000 of benefits for the Cambodian Emergency Relief Fund in mid-January in conjunction with Joan Baez, the Grateful Dead and Linda Ronstadt.

Good intentions aside, another solid album such as Freedom At Point Zero is needed to round-out the Starship's current road show.

Steve Martin fits role of perfect jerk

KATHY MCKENZIE

Daily Staff Writer

It must be said Steve Martin is the perfect choice for the title role in The Jerk.

The problem is Martin's comedic style does not lend itself easily to a full-length film. Martin is funny because he can assume so

Martin plays Navin Johnson, who decides to go out and make his way in the world after discovering he is never going to be black like the rest of his adopted family.

He goes on to work at a gas station and then as a weight guesser at a carnival, where he meets Patty Bernstein (Catlin Adams), a tough, motorcycle-riding woman who becomes his flame.

But it's another story entirely when he meets Marie (Bernadette Peters), a cosmetologist. It's true love at last for the hapless Navin, and it seems things are coming up roses when he invents a gadget that keeps glasses on one's nose. He becomes a millionaire and marries Marie and everything is swell. Or... is it?

For those of you who like Steve Martin, you'll love this movie. Director Carl Reiner gives Martin a free rein, and Martin manages to work in many elements you may remember from his two Grammy-winning comedy records. One very funny part is when Martin gets mad about the practice of cat-juggling, and the movie actually shows little kitties being tossed up in the air.

It is also amusing to see how Navin naively approaches the burden of being wealthy. He becomes the tackiest rich person anyone has ever seen. His courtship of Marie has to be the most unusual on film.

But even though Martin receives top billing in the credits, it is Peters who steals the show from him with her matured Shirley Temple looks and her sense of comic timing.

The Jerk is somewhat jerky, but it's still a lot of fun. Steve Martin aficionados, don't miss it.

many different characters in the course of his act. When he does this on the screen, it does not fit as well as in his stand-up act.

Other than that, the movie has got some truly funny bits to it. The plot itself is a humorous exercise in surrealism.

Acting falls off in Poly play

BY LORI ANDERSON

Daily Staff Writer

The sparks in Sparks Fly Upward never reached much height.

The Cal Poly performance of Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee's two-act play started off like a bonfire, but ended just warm embers.

Tara Andrews was excellent in the leading role of Felicia. Her vibrant dramatics could have communicated the story of the radio actress turned president's wife almost without words. Andrews handled well her powerful character whose temperament displayed a wide variety of emotions. Her character was one of relentless determination and complex personality.

Andrew's portrayal of Felicia is quite commendable, so commendable is fact, that it overshadows the performances of the other players.

James Kie was an appropriate choice for the role of the president who rose to power. With his dark hair slicked back and his tall stature clothed in military uniform, Kie was just as one would expect the President Jorge Brazo to look. The staunch and rigid character was well portrayed by Kie both physically and verbally.

Chris Henry, in his role as the taxi driver Garcia, was quite an excitable actor. Yet, I found it unusual the way he stooped over much of the time.

Good make-up and costuming helped Felicia's mother, played by Donna Walker, to survive. She had a raspy voice, however that grated one's nerves.

The play, which brought in an audience of about 300 Saturday night and smaller crowds the previous two nights, was strong throughout the first act.

Act 2 was all down hill.

To understand the play, one needed to understand the life of Eva Peron, wife of Argentinian dictator

Juan Peron. If you did not, the play's finale may well have left you saying "Well, what's next?"

Projections were used often throughout the play to set the stage for such scenes as palace rooms, a jungle and various highlights from European countries.

The projection of a political rally could have been more realistic had a small mob occupied the stage rather than leaving it empty and allowing a voice off stage to carry the show.

Grenzquell is one of Germany's premium beers. In fact, it's so highly regarded by Germans that they reserve it for special occasions.

Over 500 years of experience in the art of creating a fine natural beer has given Grenzquell a flavor rich, yet mellow. A flavor that tells you with every sip that this day is, indeed, special. And Grenzquell is available in a superb dark Pilsner as well.

So, if you've got something coming up that calls for a really special beer, try one Germans drink on special occasions. Grenzquell. Goethe would have wanted it that way.

Bischoff gets on-the-job training

BY LORI CAUDILL
Daily Sports Writer

Cal Poly swimmer Bill Bischoff is planning a career in coaching and, unlike most of his peers, he is getting plenty of practice on the Mustang team.

Bischoff, a physical education senior, is the assistant coach of the Cal Poly men's swim team.

"He is in a difficult situation because he is both coaching and swimming, but he has done a very good job. He is one of our team leaders," said head coach Mark Johnson.

Bischoff said, "It is hard being a peer and having any kind of authority but it is getting easier. I feel if I can coach my teammates I can coach anyone."

Bischoff says his strongest events are the 200- and 500-yard freestyle and his weakest event is the 1650-yard freestyle. He has been working to improve his times this season and has succeeded. His times for the events are: 500 freestyle, 4:44; 200 freestyle, 1:45 and in the 1650 freestyle, 16:55.

"He's in a difficult position."
Coach Johnson

Last weekend Bischoff set a new Cal Poly record in the 1,000-yard freestyle with a time of 9:55.50 which placed him 7th in NCAA Div II, when the Mustangs met the Santa Barbara Gauchos.

Bischoff, who is in his last year of eligibility, feels he is much more motivated than he was last year. He said he came to Cal Poly after two years of intensive swimming competition at junior college and he needed to take a break.

"I was burned out and I lacked motivation; I am definitely more motivated now," said Bischoff.

Bischoff is in his seventh year of swimming competition. He began competing in high school after he did well in a swim test in his P.E. class and was asked to join the team. He swam for two years at the Santa Monica Community College where he was an All-American distance freestyler in the 1650.

Bischoff, a native of Venice, California, trains about twenty-two hours a week. He says he has achieved his initial goal for the season which was to qualify for the nationals, but he has a new goal which is to place in the top five in the 500-yard freestyle.

Since the swimming season has ended Bischoff is now preparing for the nationals.

"When we are getting ready for a regular meet we rest for one day, but in training for the nationals we go through a taper program, said the 21-year-old. It consists of three weeks of gradual resting and a lot of short hard swimming instead of long stretches. You get to be really fast and strong but you don't feel tired.

Coach Johnson said that after the taper program Bischoff should take up to 10 seconds off his times.

Although Santa Barbara overpowered the Mustangs Saturday in their final meet 77-29, the team was able to qualify several more swimmers for the nationals.

The Mustangs who qualified for the 400-yard medley relay were: Steve Wright, John Edwards, Glenn Perry and Jim Keefe. Qualifiers for the 400-yard freestyle relay were Wright, Ron Hensel, Mike Peterseim and Keefe. Bischoff, Wright, Keefe and Hensel qualified for the 800-yard freestyle relay. In the individual events, Wright qualified in the 100 and 200 butterfly. Bischoff qualified for the 200- and 500-yard freestyle. In the 200-yard

Bischoff will be competing in the 200- and 500-yard freestyle at the nationals on March 19 in Youngstown, Ohio.

Bischoff feels his team has improved greatly since last year. Only one Mustang qualified for the nationals then. He said the one area the team is lacking is in the diving competition, due to inexperience.

Coach Mark Johnson agrees that the team has improved.

"This swim team is the best Poly has ever had. They have depth and quality," said Johnson.

After graduation Bischoff plans to coach swimming at either the high school or junior college level and eventually at the university level.

Sports and the video

BY BILL BROCK
Daily Sports Writer

Professional sports in the United States has become big business and all of the actors on the stage are quality performers. If a player fails to maintain a consistently high level of achievement, he is out of a job.

He cannot rest on his laurels. Yet in the sports world, there exists an animal who has absolutely no incentive to improve, yet whose actions vitally affect the outcome of every sporting encounter.

This animal is the referee, umpire or just plain official. They enjoy a god-like reputation on the field of play, interpreting sports law and punishing wrongdoers as they see fit. It is a necessary function and they perform as well as humanly possible.

The fact remains, however, that an official's best job frequently falls woefully short of perfection. Any devout sports fan can tell tales of referee mistakes which decided the outcome of a game.

From this, the question arises: If a referee is supposed to enforce the rules of the game, why isn't he equipped with all of the necessary tools to make correct decisions?

The emphasis here is on providing an extra referee for sports event, one who sits in seclusion with a video play-back monitor. If an in-doubt call arises during the course of the game, he can advise his on-field colleagues after reviewing the play in question.

In this way, referees could be provided with all the facts and more easily make correct decision. It makes sense to upgrade the quality of officiating because those decisions often turn the course of a game. If a genuine improvement can be devised, the sports world deserves to benefit from it.

Apparently, however, the referee is a sacred cow that cannot be improved. Even a technique that would eliminate human error and thereby ensure a higher over-all standard of sports justice is asking tradition to bend too much. Consider an example from baseball. An outfielder makes a long run to catch a ball with a headlong dive. The nearest umpire rules the catch invalid because the ball was trapped against the turf and consequently there is no out.

Players and managers argue with the umpires and perhaps someone is thrown out of the game. It is a volatile situation hinging on a very questionable call. The home viewer is chagrined because the truth glares at him on every replay.

Now, imagine if the umpires could call upon an unseen colleague equipped with a slow-motion playback monitor. The extra ref could examine the incident with the aid of zoom lenses from several different angles and could give an informed statement to his on-field colleagues.

In this way the best interests of sport would be served because the correct decision would emerge.
